

MARK LEE

李国煌

Mark Lee is a household name that needs no introduction in Singapore. The boisterous actor-host has been working the local entertainment scene for the past 23 years.

Over the years, Mark's versatility and multi-faceted talents has made him one of Singapore's most sought-after comedian and TV host.

Following his success in television productions, Mark Lee took on new challenges and ventured into the film industry. Since his first major feature-film role as a contractor "Ong" in the 1998 box-office hit "Money

No Enough", Mark has appeared in several Jack Neo films, including Liang Po Po, I Not Stupid, The Best Bet, Ah Long Pte Ltd, Money No Enough 2, Love Matters and Being Human. To date, Mark has acted in 18 local and international movies.

His professionalism and excellent acting skills have helped to create a household name for himself. Besides having a great support from the public at large, Mark has also earned himself 4 times the title of "Best Comedian" at past Star Awards ceremonies and has been consistently voted as one of the Top 10 Most Popular Male Artistes, of which he has since attained the "Heavenly Ranks" in 2010. Adding on to his list of achievements, he has also won the Best Variety Show host in the Star Awards twice.

In year 2007, Mark was the "Explore Singapore" ambassador for National Heritage Board.

And in year 2009, not only did Mark win the Best Actor in Singapore Film Fest but he also staged his first solo talkshow at the Drama Centre.

His career soared greater height with his debut movie Directorship "The Ghost Must be Crazy" in 2010.
